I had a nice chat with Pete Breyse this morning. He was surprised to hear that their draft 800 page tox profile makes a finding of not enough information. I think he was also surprised that I wasn't calling about the cancer issue—I noted that there were some concerns there but they were not the major driver for my call. I suggested that it would be helpful to have a scientific discussion about how we all use data and which data we use and scientific differences between formulations and technical material. He was not opposed to further scientific discussion (I noted that we did have a review option, but that did not reach resolution and we thought further discussions would be helpful). I expect as a next step John Decker will reach out to Dana next week.

Lets chat after the holiday. I hope I didn't get anything too wrong.
